Orizan, Halimin

Helios School

This chronicle is dedicated to what happened on All Hallows in the rainforest. At the start of the day, there started to be some cracking noises coming from the center of the rainforest. They sounded like the sounds of trees cracking and falling down. When we went to investigate, we found a huge red elemental fighting with a huge green elemental. The cracking sounds seemed to be the red elemental tearing down the trees with its various pyromancer sorceries. It used some sorcery to destroy the green elemental. We then saw what we believed to be the forest spirit. It was a size three wood elf with the flesh on its face stripped off to reveal its skull, with vines all over, and a morganti shortsword at its waist. It easily destroyed the red elemental, and then turned on us, saying we were killing its people, and that the rainforest was theirs. When we tryed to make a compromise, the spirit said things like, "Are you going to pack up, leave, and take the whole of your little down with you?!" along with other things. After that the forest spirit attacked us, using what seemed to be at least three death rays to destroy anybody who did not manage to escape. When we got back to town, the people who the spirit killed had their spirits come back, and all they remembered was intense heat and their spirit being forced from their body.

The second thing we went out to do on All Hallows was stop the green zombies from coming over the Green Wall. When we got there, the zombies seemed to bed fighting better than ever, interrupting healing counts, and fighting as well as we were. They also seemed to have more of a mind, seemingly partially listening to what we had to say, although everything always ended in conflict. Near the end, the Forest Spirit came out, and told us to stop killing its people. It chase us all away again, and actually hit someone who was wounded in the encounter with its morganti shortsword, which apparently does not kill them, because they came back, just whenever they get wounded, they start at minus one health. On the way back, we found the Forest Spirit a third time, this time fighting with what might have been the Volcano Spirit. The Volcano Spirit had long golden hair, and the two spirits were fighting, the Forest Spirit saying that it owned the rainforest, and the Volcano Spirit saying that it wanted to take all of it. Both of them had morganti shortswords.