A few days ago, we decided to go on a hunt for rainforest creatures. You see, we have a tamed rainforest wolfwer that helps us on missions, and we wanted more pets. We went hunting for armadillo beasts to train. First, we encountered some guards on the greenwall who attacked and wounded our wolfwer because they thought the wolfwer was untrained. After we explained to the guards that the wolfwer was trained, we moved on. We fought a bunch of zombies and vines and forest beasts, and we eventually got our armadillo beast, which we named tiny. We went back to camp, and then took Tiny somewhere in the forest to train him against some forest and volcano monsters. Now, before this, a party member had gone with the forest spirit (again) so we needed to rescue him. On the way, we ran into these humans with armour that had bite. We killed and exercised them, which was important, because soon whatever was affecting them would have been too powerful. We also scried them, which gave us the vision of zopocan builders, and then something weird happened to them, and they started being afraid of the sun. Then they went into the forest, and they liked it there, and they became vampires. Then we ran into the forest spirit who had the party member, and we failed, and 2 other party members got captured.
