Dear diary,

Sadly, I was not there for the two missions that my party went on. But they told me all about it! To start, I heard they went to the forest to get wood for the canoes. There were fairies! What they said was that one of their party members got knocked out-twice, because she tried to harvest a tree. Three fairies were playing catch, and all of them occasionally checked a center tree like it had birthday presents. Apparently food did the thing for them. They loved it. The next mission also had fairies, but more mischievous. They stole things from a bucket that belast traders had and tossed them all over the place. Sounded like fun.
