Today we investigated the lake that was glowing purple, but we hit a rocky start. My spellstones got devoured, but then we tried again and that time I realized I had mage torch, and I BURNED THE ULGATS TO SMITHERINES MWAHAHAHAHAAAA! Then we found some geysers which killed two of our party members, and one of them was our healer. So we headed back to town, got resurrected and got our spellstones back, tried again and went around the geysers, collecting the crystalline. We made it there safely, Gelf died, but we resurrected him. After a little bit, we made it to the lake, and found little purple stones, (yay elfs for finding them) and figured out that each of us were keyed to our own stone. We got to keep them, and that's all I was there for.
