Battle Log 12’th of fourthmoon

Alas, it has been a long week and tomorrow is time for the party to gather, but last Saturday, my pal Nigel Hunnybuns III set out to fulfill a truly dreadful task, to master the art of pyromagic. When I arrived at the address he attached to the invite, I saw a tall elf, probably 250 or so, with a cloak and wild mage and diviner spells. I recognized her as Senica, the cristaline shaper of the Enclave. As we gathered, I saw my partner on the trip across the map of Falnor, Alcaman (I don’t know if I misspelled so if you are reading, plz tell me how to spell) then Senica spoke, “I see you want to master the art of pyromancy” she said “well you have 3 choices on who you want to teach you” “the first option is Bellmorn, the mage schools could teach you the arts of fire.” “ Next you could choose Burningstone, an Enclave nearby, thow we don’t exactly have good relations with them, or Bellmorn, for that matter” “the third is the fay you saw in the volcano valley, the one with the leaves and flames" she said. “So what do you pick?” “the fay” Nigel said. And so we all went on are way, the first encounter, we saw some ogres and took the down quickly, I, although the best fighter, took a nasty gash and was critically wounded for the encounter, but a bit of jumpstart healing and I was back.
In the Next encounter, we saw a fairy and a talus (a stone warrior) fighting a Dreigun (a big chicken) . I quickly dispatched it with a 20UB boulder and we were off.
When we found the Fay, Nigel said “Oh fay of both flame and nature, please teach me the art of pyromagic” the fay responded “Nigel, I will teach you, IF you will protect my grove from a group of savage beasts. “I accept” Nigel declared, chest puffed up.
Now, I won’t go into too much detail because I need sleep if I will attend the meet tomorrow, but we were successful, and not only was Nigel thought pyromancy mastery, but he was gifted a longsword of fire that he smote all who dared attack the sacred grove of the fay.
