Hey, y'all, how ya doin'?

well, middle of the week update, a corner of town is Morgante slain, and a guy that we had the opportunity to talk to is also Morgante slain. It goes like this; the Tuesday adventuring class "borrowed" me from my 3D art and sculpting class and asked if I had the pieces of paper (we had been collecting pieces of paper with a weird replacement cipher)and I said " I don't, but Thorin (my brother) does," so we went on a five-minute frantic search for then and did not find them because (he told me later) he left them in the cart, so then I was informed that a corner of town had Morgante P.D.'d and that they realized that someone that they had seen many times (your typical random bystander) was the king of the court of dark, Mr. E and that they saw him without realizing he was the king (not Elvis) and felt soul fear, so one of them threw a torch, then Not Elvis came running at them to attack, so they ran for their lives and managed to get to coronate Zociotle, however, he was in the middle of some speech, they interrupted, and as soon as they started to tell him the guard stabbed him through with a weapon no more than one foot long and his blood spattered on the wheel, which the adventurers sensed as some sort of sacrifice, so they tried to clean it up but noticed it was not much help. (side note: they also found the real black scales) At this point they had found four pieces of paper and entrusted them to me for the rest of the day, later, at home, I realized that they were the same message, just two different pieces of paper, but one of the pieces we collected had a part that was not collected by the Tuesday group, so, new stuff, but we asked a friend to help with figuring the cipher out, so yeah, that sums up just Tuesday and Wednesday.

hurriedly, Gil-Galad