The Trails of living in an age of darkness

For those I may have forgotten to tell, we are in a series of trials. I have reason to believe these trails are the moon tears we have encountered. These tears represent all of our worst emotions and may be solved by displaying the opposite emotion. I do not fully understand the forces at play, but I do know that even as art imitates life, life imitates art. Whatever awful forces that created these moon tears, defiling that beautiful one in the sky with the worst emotions known to dwarf kind, seem to be defeated by the better parts of our souls when we do let them show. I know that Orkin, Lonan and I have been able to locate them in the past. I do not know why I can sense them, only that I have had feelings that often turn out correct for my entire life. If the gods or other powers wish me to know things, who am I to ignore them? I do urge us to treat this with caution, respect, and as important, however. This is our chance at greatness, to be like those in the great stories of old. It was never my intent, but I would like to be remembered fondly if I am remembered.

To stand alone is an awful thing
Away from the light of friendship and love
Take those you hold close and sing
For the good things we are all of

I unfortunately did not have time to cover all of the threads I see around us, however I believe this piece is the most important to this world at large. If you are my friend, let us continue on our journey. If you do not know my name, I wish you well in your trials and I hope that this information may aid you in your quest.
