Hello everyone! I am Temlin, a new adventurer for the nation of Eldar. Before I tell you about what we have done so far, let me share a few things about myself:

- I come from orizon, my parents lived there, and we moved to halimin when the camp got packed up.
- When I heard about adventuring opportunities in eldar, I started the journey immediately, seeking to be like my parents
- I am a human native to falnorian

Anyway, let’s get back to business. Most of the day was just practice; I got my potion kit (which I sold to save up for chainmail), and my 2 stilettos. Then, the questknights (special eldar knights who can train both mage and warrior and wear armor while casting spells) prepared some challenges for us. Below are some of them

- Bandits: they would pretend to be bandits. These bandits would either ambush us or pretend to be normal people. This was a test for our combat skills, and we won with minimal losses
- Parkour: they would set up a parkour course for us. This was to test our speed, agility, and teamwork. Speed and agility were good, but we didn't do so well on teamwork
- Noblemen: they would pretend to be nobles, who we would have to communicate with. This tested our chivalry, which we mostly succeeded on.
