Our party now has medium-low chivalry! And with new chivalry comes new innkeepers and missions! Our new innkeeper was named Goldy. I believe he had levels 8-mercenary and 2-viking, but my memory of those stats isn't perfect. He then had 2 levels in a class called Aethermancer, which is some sort of weather mage from very far away. He had a very stereotypical appearance for eldar too.

Our new mission we could go on was trying to stop the mageocracy in illionor, which we went on today. Goldy was also medium-low chivalry, and he had a brother named (I think) Jet. We voted to go on the Illionor mission. Without ANYBODY who knew how to speak elvish, except a scribe with only three levels in scribe.

The first encounter there were members of the Illion alliance approaching us and trying to get them to help us with various things, although none of us except the scribe spoke any elvish, with the scribe knowing only a little bit. Eventually, however, Jet came and helped us learn whatever they wanted us to do.

In the next encounter, there were rapid-fire waves of the mageocracy capturing the Illion alliance. There were five waves, each one having Mageocracy carrying Illion Alliance members away. We won one of the waves. In another wave, we dropped everyone except the two who were carrying the illion alliance out, but we still lost it because the illion alliance member was captured.

The next thing we decided to do on the mission was just retry that. The first encounter on the way there was a powerful mage accompanied by mageocracy, where we dropped all of them. The powerful mage was at least rank 3, and it had "With sorcery of witchcraft, I kill you and extract your memories", which hit one of our party members. We tried to then drop the mage very fast, because if they had our memories, news would get out about who we were. We dropped the mage and all of mageocracy, as the powerful mage was still a mage, and was very squishy and dropped to a single stiletto.

We then tried to carry the mage back so the Illion Alliance, as I would not doubt the mage holds value to the Mageocracy, and it also had our memories. We succeeded in that endeavor, and It had a mastercrafted cloak we could take by hiring a thief.

- Bartholomew
P.S: As of writing this chronicle, I am now rank 2 with a few extra levels on top of that too! That powerful mage ain't so powerful anymore!