Hello there. Before I begin this chronicle, I had some very interesting things that I acquired. As you may know, two weeks ago I tried to open a library and I unfortunately found out that I don't have the materials to start one. However, I did get three books labeled: "The dark council and it's creations.", "History of Witchcraft and Necromancy", and my favorite, "The compendium of undead." Today,in the inn with Goldy, A Quest Knight with full plate and dragon scales came and whispered something in Goldy's ear. We were then told that we should decide fast where we should go and someone stepped in our Illionor voting hoop and the Quest Knight said "That's where you're going. GO FAST." We then all ran to the teleport circle where we decided that we were just going to straight up wipe-out the Mageocracy. I had foreseen much fighting and blood and death to come, so I chose to not go. When they came back, I could see that they went through a lot and when I asked them what had happened, putting it shortly, BAD THINGS. Now is likely a good time to tell you that our chivalry is now DECLINING I was and still am very worried about our chivalry, because I feel that if some people are doing very chivalrous actions and others are not, that should not affect us. After our first mission, we decided to guard the healing tower. There were some REALLY cool things that had happened somehow at random times, everybody took an awaken or a rebirth! Anyways, I am getting distracted. We did a relatively good job at protecting the Healing Tower and only four Mageocracy mages made it in. After that, we decided to go back, and this is the fun part. I sacrificed SIX mana for the day to death to build a relationship with it. I talked to it before I drew the stones. I feel that everyone should worship Death and that it is the best deity to ever exist. I really feel that everyone should establish a good relationship with Death because it is the most reasonable. Unfortunately though, I did pull a weight of four which means that I have magical transportation issues. This will be very bad for me as I help the Quest Knights so I have to get into a teleport circle in order to train new classes. I hope this chronicle brings you well. I must stop writing. Thank you for your time.

With much fright,

Nyx the 4th