More vermin?

The adventurers guarded a box of supplies to bring to the bellona shrine for their first few missions, and they successfully got it to the bellona shrine. They then sacrificed some of their weapons and other stuff, got a blessing from bellona, and dueled the bellona priests. They unfortunately lost but at least got a blessing! They then went to get spider parts for the mage school but lost and were eaten by the spiders

I almost died

This is a memory I got when I almost died during this adventuring session while trying to stop people from vandalizing a temple to the cunning god. I was mountain climbing during it just to clarify

As I scaled the mountain, an enormous, roaring wind threw me off the cliff. Thankfully, I was attached to a rope and did not fall. I was very high up, so the air was frigid and the wind was crazy fast. The wind blew hard again and I tried to keep my grip but the rock was slippery from the melted snow and I was thrown off the mountain again, sending me tumbling and I just barely stopped myself from crashing into the cliff. I continued climbing even though I was out of breath and utterly exhausted. I pulled out a cookie from my pocket, ate it, and then just just sat there until I caught my breath. Then I continued climbing the mountain, knowing I could die today.
